Susan embraced her calling as an editor, yet her genuine passion lies in expressing her creativity through her writing. By sharing her process, she hopes to inspire children to discover their own imaginative writing and story-telling abilities. Her interactions with children emphasize themes of family, farm life, incorporating life lessons on the many emotions children struggle with—drawing inspiration from her grandparents and the barn she grew up in.

Susan and her husband are empty-nesters residing on their small farm near Princeton, Illinois, where they nurture their beloved 'family' of animals.

MY FOCUS ON FAMILY:

Kids sometimes struggle with loneliness or lack of acceptance and can feel 'a bit lost' at times—grownups can feel this way too! But knowing that family is the one place we can all go to feel safe, included, and understood means that...

There truly is no greater strength than the unconditional love and support of family.

KIND WORDS:

"Ruffled Feathers" is the sweet and beautifully illustrated story of Griffin Goose and his search for his family. Griffin's determination to find his flock leads him on a quest that unlocks the secret behind the true meaning of family. Birds of a feather might flock together, but family is where the love is."

Say hello to my feathered buddy Griffin (splashing around) and his brother. These charming boys kicked off my epic journey and sparked the whole theme for my book series!
